1 June 2018

Ross Broad Assistant Director, Drug Policy and Reform

Health and Human Services 2017-18 was a significant year for the AOD sector

New $38.4m for expanded community-based services

100 new residential rehabilitation beds

Release of Parliamentary Inquiry into Drug Law Reform

Progression of new regional residential rehabilitation facilities

New Aboriginal AOD worker positions and other reforms

Implementation of new intake and assessment arrangements

Harm reduction – Peer-led, overdose and naloxone initiatives

A 2017-18 highlight was the implementation of new Ice Action Plan initiatives

Ice Action Plan Stage Three - $78.4 million in 2017-18

Implementation of these initiatives and other 2017-18 Budget initiatives is largely complete

Released in October 2017, the Drug Rehabilitation Plan provided even more activity for the sector

100 extra residential rehabilitation beds

28 day withdrawal rehab model

Cracking down on dodgy providers

More support for people and their families

Training new AOD nurses

Trial of a medically supervised injecting room

Several initiatives from the AOD workforce 'lift' have been progressed, with sector engagement ongoing

Wider $2.5 million package of immediate investment to boost the alcohol and other drug workforce, including:

- attraction campaign to encourage people to a career in the alcohol and other drug sector
- support for a jobs board, delivered by VAADA
- free, high quality training for new workers without previous experience in the alcohol and other drug sector
- scholarships to encourage lifelong learning for AOD workers, with dedicated access for Aboriginal AOD workers
- a range of other placement, training and learning opportunities

Underpinned by new AOD Workforce Strategy
